Aaron McMillan's music lives on...

After more than 12 months of being unavailable, Aaron McMillan's 9 CD set "Piano Collection" has been re-released in a limited serial numbered edition.

Through the efforts of 2GB's Alan Jones in association with the manufacturer, ISD, this collection is available for the first time since Aaron's passing in 2007.

Aaron McMillan was a brilliant classical pianist who lost the fight against cancer at a young age, virtually at the start of his career. In 2003 and 2004 he performed at the Sydney Opera House to packed audiences. At 24 he was the youngest concert pianist to perform at the Opera House.

"He was a remarkable young Australian" said Alan Jones. "For seven years Aaron suffered from cancer. He fought strenuously against it, but many things conspired against that fight. The cancer began in the brain and in spite of the brilliant work of his brain surgeon, Dr Charlie Teo, the cancer spread to his spine"

Dr Teo has described McMillan as inspirational, a great friend and a great ambassador for the Cure for Life Foundation for research into brain cancer.

Susan Wyndham, journalist and author of the book "Life In His Hands" (a joint biography of McMillan and Teo) pointed out "Aaron received a Mo Award from the entertainment industry for his outstanding contribution to Australian music".

The re-release is being produced by CD manufacturer, ISD. "It was Aaron's dying wish that his CD collection be available after his death" said Vaughan Hillier, Director of ISD. "It has taken us months to sort out legal and production issues in order to make this available again" he explained.

Aaron spent the last months of his life producing the Aaron McMillan Piano Collection, which was launched a month before his death and quickly sold out. To commemorate the re-release of this set, a special serial numbered edition of 1,000 is being produced. The Opera House performances are part of this set.

The Limited Edition boxed set, which sells for $79.95, can be ordered by calling 1300 722 362. Or visit the website: aaronmcmillanmusic.com to hear samples of the recordings.
